THE COLLEGE OF LAW. Attendance at the law school continues to grow larger. The increase this year is 26%, on a basis of comparison with the registration at the corresponding date last year. It is interesting to compare this enrollment with that for 1916-1917, the last normal year before the war. The figures are as follows:

	First Year	Second Year	Third Year	Total
1916-1917	50	37	48	138
1920-1921	88	51	24	163
1921-1922	95	63	50	208

This year's record brings the attendance back to the place it was before the requirements for preliminary college work for admission to the law school became effective in 1914. It marks the acceptance, seemingly, on the part of law students, of the requirement for longer and broader preliminary education as a foundation for the technical study of law.

The tendency has been, very distinctly from a period at least as far back as the establishment of the college work requirement, for students to exceed the minimum demands in the way of college preparation. Fourteen of the men entering this year have college degrees. Forty-seven have had three or more years of college work. Many of these students are eligible for an arts degree upon the completion of their first year's work in law, on the Combined Course arrangement, whereby one year's work in law may count toward both degrees. This arrangement not only holds good with the
